Here to help you

This guide is for you if you are out of work or on a low income and receiving benefits, and are likely to be moved onto Universal Credit.

The benefits system is changing and many benefits are being phased out and replaced by Universal Credit. The Money Advice Service has put together this handy guide with things you can do now to get ready for Universal Credit.

What is different about Universal Credit?

Universal Credit will be paid directly into your bank account

You'll get one monthly payment for your whole household

Any help you get with your rent will be included in your payment

You'll have to pay your landlord yourself

Most people will claim Universal Credit online

This guide will show you how to:

1. Get the right bank account
2. Draw up a budget
3. Get online to manage your claim

1

Get the right bank account

Did you know?

If you open a bank account that doesn't have an overdraft facility you won't normally have to go through a credit check.

Choose an account that lets you receive automated payments

Your bank, building society, or credit union account will need to receive automated payments because that is how your Universal Credit will be paid.

Set up Direct Debits

It's useful to set up Direct Debits and standing orders for bills like your rent, gas and electricity.

Decide whether you need a joint account

If you and your partner are both eligible for Universal Credit, you'll get a single payment for both of you – you can choose to have it paid into a joint or a single account.

2

Draw up a budget

Did you know?

Over half of UK households who keep a budget say it gives them peace of mind and makes them feel better about life in general.*

Use our budget planner

Use our online budget planner tool to sort out your finances and draw up a list of all your income and outgoings.

Prioritise your rent payment

If you're used to having your rent paid directly to your landlord you'll soon be responsible for paying it yourself. You will need to keep it separate from your general spending money.

Get ready for monthly payments

Universal Credit will be paid monthly so if you're used to working out your spending weekly or fortnightly, you'll have to start managing your money across the whole month.

3

Get online

Did you know?

Most people will have to make their Universal Credit claim - and keep their account up to date - online.

Get access to a computer

If you don't have access to a computer connected to the internet, ask at your Jobcentre and they will tell you where you can get online. Or pop into your local library.

Sign up for a training course

If you're worried your IT skills aren't good enough to be able to claim your Universal Credit online, your library should be able to help you find a course.

Start using the internet to manage your money

Being online gives you access to lots of ways to save money – from cheaper energy tariffs to money off vouchers and comparison websites.
